INTRODUCTION

In 1996 Bill Henry served the Central Georgia Genealogical Society (CGGS) as Chairman of the Publications Committee and Editor of the Quarterly, and was responsible for the CGGS publication of over forty books. Bill did it largely by himself, and did an outstanding job on everything he did. When Bill Henry (1921-1996) died he left the Central Georgia Genealogical Society (CGGS) in a panic because we had no replacement for him. Victor Myrick, in very bad health himself, agreed to put the Quarterly together if the members would do the research and give it to him to send to the publisher. Victor did some very thorough research at the Washington Memorial Library to see what material had not been documented in our 27-county area. He prepared index cards with the title and film number, and asked the members to review the cards and select one to research and submit for publication in the Quarterly. I selected Pulaski County Deed Books "A", "B", "C" and "D", and other members selected topics of interest to them. That is how I initially began collecting this information. As I reached the halfway point, I began to think that I might put the information in book form to benefit fellow genealogists.

As stated above, I copied these records from a roll of microfilm (#4498) at the Washington Memorial Library in Macon, GA. When necessary I would visit the Pulaski County courthouse to get information that was unreadable on the microfilm. Although the handwriting was hard to read at times, it was superior to most handwriting that I have seen in such records. All in all the Pulaski clerks did an outstanding job of recording the Pulaski County deeds. Having said that, please realize that some of the deeds lacked some of the standard data such as the date of recording, the land lot number, district, acreage, etc, but for the most part that data was consistently recorded.

Speaking of the clerks, three of them signed almost every deed between 1807 and 1816, and I did not include their signatures for recording the deeds in the index. If they bought or sold land, or were a witness, I did include them in the index. The clerks were: (1) Richard H. Thomas – 7 Nov 1807-10 Oct 1813; (2) Turner Everett – 5 Feb 1814-5 Jan 1816; and (3) Edward Smith – 13 Mar 1816-30 May 1816.

In 1808 the Georgia General Assembly divided Laurens County by a north and south line running midway between the Oconee and Ocmulgee Rivers, and the western half was Pulaski County. At that time Wilkinson, embracing what is now Twiggs County, extended westward to the Ocmulgee, was the northern boundary, and Telfair County, whose limits extended a little north of the present city of Eastman, was the southern border. In 1810 Hartford was established as the site of the public buildings. These Pulaski County boundaries existed until 1821.

Unless otherwise stated, the county mentioned in the deed was a Georgia county. If the county was in another state I mentioned the county and state. I did this to prevent typing Georgia several hundred (maybe more) times.

As you search this book for your ancestors please check every conceivable spelling of your ancestor's name. I copied the names as they were spelled in the deed even though the spelling was different than it was in the preceding deed. In several instances the person's name was spelled three different ways in the same deed, and in many cases the spelling varied over this nine-year timeframe.

I also abbreviated the term "land lot" with LL. You will see this abbreviation throughout this book.

I hope you find this book interesting and informative.
